HUNTED FOR GRACE, BUT FOUND ANOTHER

Billy Woods Connects With Kahi
While Looking for Escaped Negro Murderer.

Yesterday Billy Woods, hunted for Gines and caught Sam Kahi, and having missed the larger game was content with the smaller. Woods, assistant warden at the territorial prison, was stationed at the transport-boat, watching for the escaped negro murderer, when he happened to notice a small Hawaiian, fairly well dressed, easing off towards the middle distance. He at once recognized Kahi, the boy who broke away from the chain-gang in Manoa Valley bay before yesterday.

Woods gave chase at once and ran the boy down in a lumber pile near the Honolulu Iron Works. Kahi had on a light pair of trousers, a blue cotton superfine silk shirt and a new hat, and his breath suggested a brewery. When he was searched at the police station he had on his person four knives, a number of old rags, a large package of receipts and billheads and a deposit slip with the First National which showed that he had several hundred dollars on deposit. The money, however, is of the stuff dreams are made of, as having picked up the slip in the course of his wanderings.

The clothes he was wearing belonged to the Japanese boy employed by Miss Rose Davison, whom he rallied upon escaping. Among his other personal effects was a letter from her to an erstwhile sweetheart, with which the police took liberties. The following chapter is entitled from it:

"I come back, Mary. I like you to stop down till I come back on Masui Maru for Japan east I am going back again with you and then we will get underway down here because I am never so you that you will never go out at night." He concluded by signing "Good night, dear, lovely darling, Mary L. S. Your sweetheart, Sam Kahi."

Sam's last escapade may cost him another year in prison. Judge Andrade having looked up the law covering his offense, which provides that term as a maximum sentence.

AIKEN CONCRETE
BUILDER IS SHIPPED

Captain Casner, commanding quartermaster, U. S. A., received information recently that an Aiken concrete construction outfit has been shipped by the war department to Honolulu. The outfit will be the basis of some of the machinery to used in the construction of the permanent army post at Leilehua.

Captain Falls, depot quartermaster, U.
S. A., will complete his detail here in September. Whether he will be continued in office here or transferred to another post is uncertain.

Suisse Soldier's Equipment.

The Swiss infantryman is very heavily burdened, says Le Vulgarisation Secutive. Not to mention the weight of his uniform and the small tent on his back, in full marching order he must carry a load of 21.8 kilograms, and this comprises only a single reserve ration and one ration of bread.

His heavy rifle, with bayonet, weighs 5.4 kilograms. This weight exceeds that of the French rifle by 500 grams, the German by 700, the Italian by 800 and the Austrian rifle by 1100 grams.
